

Gender and the Evidence functions in social development

April 30-June 4, 2020

Why Is This Being Organized?

Without addressing gender inequality the promise of full social development under the Sustainable Development Goals will not be delivered. Without applying our evidence talents across evaluation, research, and studies we will not have the insights to focus and assess social development initiatives effect on gender inequality. Fortunately, a wide variety of actors are applying thoughtful evidence approaches to gender issues. Much of this is happening on the ground in real life social development programming. We have the opportunity to learn from these excellent gender-informed programming and evidence activities.

What is a Road Trip?

This learning event is structured as a Road Trip. Participants may join one or several or all sessions enabling them to enjoy the whole Road Trip, or to take just those routes which are most interesting and useful. Additional materials and learning opportunities will be included on the accompanying web site so you can come early, stay late, and circle back. Sessions will include participatory elements for even greater exchange of knowledge in a virtual campfire style. Whichever route a participant takes, the common destination for each is to become a gender champion and an evidence champion.
