

Gender and the Evidence functions in social development

Session #9: Using Evidence for Gender Impact: Research Priorities for a) Addressing the Intersections between Violence against Women and Violence against Children, and b) Gender-responsive Social Protection

Maha Muna, Regional Gender Advisor,
UNICEF Regional Office for South Asia

Zahrah Nesbitt-Ahmed, Gender and Development Research Manager,
UNICEF Office of Research - Innocenti

Alessandra Guedes - Gender and Development Research Manager,
UNICEF Office of Research - Innocenti

Thursday, 28 May 2020
2:30–4pm India
Standard Time

To access the session, please click the link
below to join the webinar:

<https://unicef.zoom.us/j/97271840292>
Password: 080939

A learning Road Trip: Gender and the Evidence Functions in Social Development is an 11-session virtual learning event. Each session explores a theme at the intersection of evidence and gender programming. Each session is based on actual gender and developmental programming issues, and draws on the real-world work of partners including UNICEF and UN Women. Participants may join any or all sessions. See the link below to access more information.

Session #9: This session highlights how evidence, particularly evidence on gender dimensions, has been analyzed and used to guide two key priority areas for research at UNICEF's Office of Research Innocenti: the intersections between violence against children and violence against women and gender-responsive and age sensitive social protection.

Through presentation and discussion, we hope the participants will:

1. Become familiar with how evidence can be analyzed to define research priorities and to design evidence-based policies and programs.
2. Explore how research and evidence are used to i) improve the design and implementation of social protection programs that are gender-responsive and age-sensitive and ii) mobilize action to address VAW/VAC - in order to attain the desired impact.
3. Know where in the organization (UNICEF) they can get support for their own efforts in implementation research and learn about ongoing collaborations to advance gender research.

♥ Can't wait to get started? Material for this session and additional information is available at https://padlet.com/unicef_rosa/gender_evidence

Password: 20G&Eroadtrip20

♥ Register for the road trip to receive updated information and reserve a spot in sessions that interest you:

https://www.surveymonkey.com/r/Gender_evidence_learning_Roadtrip